FILM SYNOPSIS

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

For over one hundred harrowing days one man was the conscience of a world that turned its back on the slaughter of 800,000 human beings. That man was General Roméo Dallaire commander of the small U.N. peacekeeping force stationed in Rwanda during the 1994 genocide. Shake Hands With the Devil: The Journey of Roméo Dallaire movingly documents his return to Rwanda for the 10th anniversary of the genocide, reliving the political and psychological drama in unforgettable detail. Director Peter Raymont follows him as he revisits the sites of mass murder and heroism, vividly brought back to life by his traumatic memories and striking newsreel footage.

This film does not claim to describe the Rwandan tragedy from the point of view of the Rwandans. On the contrary it is about our point of view towards Rwanda, about how the international community abandoned the people of Rwanda in their time of greatest need. It is about Dallaire's heroic efforts but ultimate failure to challenge and change that point of view and to prevent or mitigate the inestimable tragedy which ensued. And it is about Dallaire's haunted memories and emotional scars that have changed his life and made him a crusader for multi-lateral peace keeping.

Dallaire raised the flag for the U.N. mission in Rwanda's capital Kigali in November, 1993 just after a truce had gone into effect between the majority Hutu government and the Tutsi rebels. Diplomatic sources already were signaling that an apocalypse was in the making. Extremist Hutu militias called the Interhamwe were drawing up lists of Tutsi and moderate Hutu leaders for extermination. In January the U.N. refused permission to Dallaire to confiscate weapons caches, while Hutu radio stations mounted increasingly hysterical attacks against Tutsis, dehumanizing them as "cockroaches."

On April 6th a rocket of unknown origin shot down the Hutu President's jet as it was preparing to land at the Kigali airport. This put into motion a well-planned slaughter of Tutsis and moderate Hutus; neighbor killed neighbor; in churches where many sought sanctuary, parishioners attacked their fellow church goers with machetes. Dallaire's U.N. forces suffered some losses causing Belgium to withdraw its troops which compromised the core of the peacekeeping force. Several powers sent in well-armed troops but disappointingly only to extricate their own nationals. Dallaire could not accept this calculus that one European life was somehow more valuable than thousands of black Africans, pointing out the difference in response between Rwanda and Yugoslavia.

Dallaire could do little because his mandate explicitly forbade intervening militarily to stop the conflict. His faxes to New York became more and more frantic but as we now know the U.N., and especially the U.S., were determined to downplay the situation. They did not want to become involved in "another Somalia,” in other words a protracted civil war in another small African state in which they had few strategic interests. Dallaire and the men under his command, were in essence abandoned by the rest of the world without the forces or mandate to do anything about the massacre. Nonetheless, a member of Doctors Without Borders credits Dallaire with being able to save thousands of lives and a reporter for the BBC praises him for trying single-handedly to keep Rwanda in the headlines while such distractions as the O.J. Simpson trial dominated the nightly news.

By July the pressure on Dallaire had become too much; his communiques were becoming increasingly incoherent and he asked to be relieved of his command; he blamed himself for not being able to turn world opinion and began to feel he had penetrated to the “heart of darkness,” that “he had shaken hands with the Devil.” Upon his return to Canada his condition worsened; he twice attempted suicide; General Dallaire was the highest ranking military officer ever hospitalized for post traumatic stress disorder.

As part of his recovery, Dallaire wrote a book also entitled Shake Hands With the Devil describing his experiences and making recommendations for strengthening the U.N.’s conflict resolution capabilities. If Dallaire is not a traditional hero, he and this film are unflinching witnesses to one of the crowning moral failures of the international community in the 20th century.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

I'm embarrassed to tell you that, like most people, I "missed" the Rwanda genocide. I vaguely remember media reports of tribal warfare in an obscure central-African country. But almost every night during those 100 days (April-July, 1994) the O.J. Simpson Trial and the Tonya Harding/Nancy Kerrigan incident dominated the news.

After the horrific mass killings in Rwanda ended, we began hearing about General Roméo Dallaire – the Canadian who commanded the U.N. troops that were supposed to keep peace in Rwanda – the man who had since attempted suicide, unable to live with the horrific demons that haunted him. After I returned from Rwanda where I'd made another documentary, five years after the genocide, I became determined to track down Roméo Dallaire and see if we could make a film together – in Rwanda.

Although a part of him wanted to return, General Dallaire wasn't quite ready to go back. He was struggling to write his extraordinary book; he was undergoing therapy for post-traumatic stress disorder; he needed to testify at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in Arusha, Tanzania. And part of him wasn't sure if going back made sense. What purpose would it serve? How would it affect him?

But after much discussion, Dallaire decided he was ready and able to return in April, 2004. It was the 10th anniversary of the genocide, the Rwandan government had invited him, and he wanted to show his wife, Elizabeth, the special people and places that had taken over his life.

I was honoured that General Dallaire decided to trust me with his story. With financing in place (CBC, Rogers Documentary Fund, Canadian TV Fund), and a talented crew onboard (cameraman John Westheuser, sound-recordist, Ao Loo, production manager, Patrick Reed, interpreter Jean-Thierry Nkulikiyumukiza and stills photographer Peter Bregg) we arrived in Rwanda for two exhilarating and exhausting weeks.

This film documents that extraordinary emotional journey - back to the killing fields, back to confront the devil, back to break bread with Rwandans who, like Dallaire, had managed to survive the carnage. Our documentary weaves together this return journey with a chronicle of the genocide itself. Back home in Toronto, we augmented this material with several interviews: Dallaire's two military assistants in Rwanda, Brent Beardsley and Phil Lancaster; writer Gerald Caplan; U.N. Special Envoy, Stephen Lewis; CBC's Michael Enright, Elizabeth Dallaire; and, finally an exhausting four hour debrief with General Dallaire himself.

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

In the caring hands of skilled editor Michèle Hozer, a tale of horror, deceit, duplicity and ultimately heroism emerged. I found myself having to confront the nature of evil. What is it in human nature that drives people to pick up a machete, go next door, and hack their neighbours to death? What other force of evil turns otherwise decent men and women at the United Nations or in the White House into passive bystanders as 800,000 innocent men, women and children are slaughtered? Despite their denials, these people knew what was happening in Rwanda. Almost daily, General Dallaire sent urgent faxes and made desperate phone calls, pleading for reinforcements that never came and an expanded mandate that was never given.

This is the story of one man who cared, who believes we are our brother's keeper, who put his life on the line to save tens of thousands of others, who understands that the value of a human life in Rwanda is equal to a human life anywhere in the world. We are proud to share this extraordinary journey with you.

FILMMAKER'S BIOGRAPHY

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

Documentary Filmmaker, journalist and writer PETER RAYMONT produced and directed over 100 documentary films during a 33-year career. His films have taken him to Ethiopia, Nicaragua, India, Rwanda, the High Arctic and throughout North America and Europe. He is the recipient of 35 international awards including the Canadian Genie for Best Documentary for The World Is Watching, (1988) a critical examination of the role and responsibility of the international media reporting from Nicaragua, and Gemini Awards for his 6-hour fly-on-the-wall series on the business of hockey, The New Ice Age (1998); Arctic Dreamer: The Lonely Quest of Vilhjalmur Stefansson (2003) and The World Stopped Watching (2004).

Raymont's films are often provocative investigations of "hidden worlds" in politics, the media and big business, as well as Native, social and human rights issues. His films are broadcast on numerous TV networks around the world.

His career began in 1971 at the National Film Board of Canada in Montreal where he worked as an editor, director and producer for 7 years. While at the NFB, he also taught film and video production in the Canadian Arctic. In 1978, Raymont moved to Toronto and established his own independent film and television production company, Investigative Productions.

With his new company White Pine Pictures, in partnership with Lindalee Tracey, Raymont has recently completed Bhopal: The Search for Justice and The Undefended Border (3 X 1 hr), following the work of Canadian Immigration Officers post 9/11. His next films include an examination of the truth behind the nuclear tragedy in Chernobyl, making the 20th anniversary of the disaster, and Black Death, documenting the work of Canadian doctors and nurses fighting the AIDS disaster in Lesotho.

Raymont is a founding member of The Canadian Independent Film Caucus, a lobby group that argues for an independent voice in Canada's film and television industry.

CRITICAL COMMENT

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

"Chilling, heartbreaking and essential viewing. 4 Stars"

— Joel McConvey, EYE MAGAZINE

"Wrenching. A solidly absorbing documentary. The film is part therapeutic personal exorcism and part passionate humanitarian indictment. Raymont's documentary uses the lingering trauma of one man as a way of opening on larger questions of global indifference and responsibility"

— Geoff Pevere, Movie Critic, THE TORONTO STAR

"Peter Raymont's docu Shake Hands With the Devil emerges as one of strongest films at the Toronto International Film Festival, returning in graphic, painstaking detail to the scene of the carnage in the company of the man who had been charged with preventing it. It is almost possible to smell the stench of rotting flesh in the country's streets"

— Scott Foundas, VARIETY

"A fascinating portrait of a man broken both by the horror of Rwanda and his inability to stop the genocide. The emotional tone is pure ghost story"

— Cameron Bailey, NOW MAGAZINE

"Gritty and powerful...Raymont provides insight by wisely shining tiny beams of light into the black maze of a psyche that has seen horrors unimaginable to most and sustained almost insupportable guilt"

— Susan Tolusso, MONTAGE MAGAZINE

UNITED NATIONS CONVENTION ON THE PREVENTION AND PUNISHMENT OF THE CRIME OF GENOCIDE

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

Approved and proposed for signature and ratification or accession by General Assembly resolution 260 A (III) of 9 December 1948
entry into force 12 January 1951, in accordance with article XIII

The Contracting Parties,

Having considered the declaration made by the General Assembly of the United Nations in its resolution 96 (I) dated 11 December 1946 that genocide is a crime under international law, contrary to the spirit and aims of the United Nations and condemned by the civilized world, Recognizing that at all periods of history genocide has inflicted great losses on humanity, and Being convinced that, in order to liberate mankind from such an odious scourge, international co-operation is required, Hereby agree as hereinafter provided:

Article 1 - The Contracting Parties confirm that genocide, whether committed in time of peace or in time of war, is a crime under international law which they undertake to prevent and to punish.

Article 2 - In the present Convention, genocide means any of the following acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such:

- (a) Killing members of the group
- (b) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group
- (c) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part
- (d) Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group
- (e) Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group.

Article 3 - The following acts shall be punishable:

- (a) Genocide
- (b) Conspiracy to commit genocide
- (c) Direct and public incitement to commit genocide
- (d) Attempt to commit genocide
- (e) Complicity in genocide.

Article 4 - Persons committing genocide or any of the other acts enumerated in article III shall be punished, whether they are constitutionally responsible rulers, public officials or private individuals.

Article 5 - The Contracting Parties undertake to enact, in accordance with their respective Constitutions, the necessary legislation to give effect to the provisions of the present Convention, and, in particular, to provide effective penalties for persons guilty of genocide or any of the other acts enumerated in article III.

Article 6 - Persons charged with genocide or any of the other acts enumerated in article III shall be tried by a competent tribunal of the State in the territory of which the act was committed, or by such international penal tribunal as may have jurisdiction with respect to those Contracting Parties which shall have accepted its jurisdiction.

Article 7 - Genocide and the other acts enumerated in article III shall not be considered as political crimes for the purpose of extradition. The Contracting Parties pledge themselves in such cases to grant extradition in accordance with their laws and treaties in force.

Article 8 - Any Contracting Party may call upon the competent organs of the United Nations to take such action under the Charter of the United Nations as they consider appropriate for the prevention and suppression of acts of genocide or any of the other acts enumerated in article III.

Article 9 - Disputes between the Contracting Parties relating to the interpretation, application or fulfilment of the present Convention, including those relating to the responsibility of a State for genocide or for any of the other acts enumerated in article III, shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice at the request of any of the parties to the dispute.

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

Article 10 - The present Convention, of which the Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall bear the date of 9 December 1948.

Article 11 - The present Convention shall be open until 31 December 1949 for signature on behalf of any Member of the United Nations and of any nonmember State to which an invitation to sign has been addressed by the General Assembly. The present Convention shall be ratified, and the instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. After 1 January 1950, the present Convention may be acceded to on behalf of any Member of the United Nations and of any non-member State which has received an invitation as aforesaid. Instruments of accession shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 12 - Any Contracting Party may at any time, by notification addressed to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, extend the application of the present Convention to all or any of the territories for the conduct of whose foreign relations that Contracting Party is responsible.

Article 13 - On the day when the first twenty instruments of ratification or accession have been deposited, the Secretary-General shall draw up a proces-verbal and transmit a copy thereof to each Member of the United Nations and to each of the non-member States contemplated in article 11. The present Convention shall come into force on the ninetieth day following the date of deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession. Any ratification or accession effected, subsequent to the latter date shall become effective on the ninetieth day following the deposit of the instrument of ratification or accession.

Article 14 - The present Convention shall remain in effect for a period of ten years as from the date of its coming into force. It shall thereafter remain in force for successive periods of five years for such Contracting Parties as have not denounced it at least six months before the expiration of the current period. Denunciation shall be effected by a written notification addressed to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 15 - If, as a result of denunciations, the number of Parties to the present Convention should become less than sixteen, the Convention shall cease to be in force as from the date on which the last of these denunciations shall become effective.

Article 16 - A request for the revision of the present Convention may be made at any time by any Contracting Party by means of a notification in writing addressed to the Secretary-General. The General Assembly shall decide upon the steps, if any, to be taken in respect of such request.

Article 17 - The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall notify all Members of the United Nations and the non-member States contemplated in article XI of the following:

- (a) Signatures, ratifications and accessions received in accordance with article 11
- (b) Notifications received in accordance with article 12
- (c) The date upon which the present Convention comes into force in accordance with article 13
- (d) Denunciations received in accordance with article 14
- (e) The abrogation of the Convention in accordance with article 15
- (f) Notifications received in accordance with article 16.

Article 18 - The original of the present Convention shall be deposited in the archives of the United Nations. A certified copy of the Convention shall be transmitted to each Member of the United Nations and to each of the non-member States contemplated in article XI.

Article 19 - The present Convention shall be registered by the Secretary-General of the United Nations on the date of its coming into force.

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

TO: BOOH-BOOH/DALLAIRE, UNAMIR ONLY
NO DISTRIBUTION
FROM: ANNAN, UNATIONS, NEW YORK
NUMBER: UNAMIR: 100
SUBJECT: Contacts with Informant

1. We have carefully reviewed the situation in the light of your MIR-79. We cannot agree to the operation contemplated in paragraph 7 of your cable, as it clearly goes beyond the mandate entrusted to UNAMIR under resolution 872 (1993).
2. However, on the assumption that you are convinced that the information provided by the informant is absolutely reliable, we request you to undertake the initiatives described in the following paragraphs.
3. SRSG and FC should request urgent meeting with the President. At that meeting you should inform the President that you have received apparently reliable information concerning the activities of the Interhamwe militia which represents a clear threat to the peace process. You should inform him that these activities include the training and deployment of subversive groups in Kigali as well as the storage and distribution of weapons to these groups.
4. You should inform him that these activities constitute a clear violation of the provisions of the Arusha peace agreement and of the Kigali weapons-secure area. You should assume that he is not aware of these activities, but insist that he must ensure that these subversive activities are immediately discontinued and inform you within 48 hours of the measures taken in this regard, including the recovery of the arms which have been distributed.
5. You should advise the President that, if any violence occurs in Kigali, you would have to immediately bring to the attention of the Security Council the information you have received on the activities of the militia, undertake investigations to determine who is responsible and make appropriate recommendations to the Security Council.
6. Before meeting with the President you should inform the Ambassadors of Belgium, France and the United States of your intentions and suggest to them that they may wish to consider making a similar démarche.
7. For security considerations, we leave it to your discretion to decide whether to inform the PM(D) of your plans before or after the meeting with the President. When you meet with the PM(D), you should explain to him the limits of your mandate. You should also assure him that, while the mandate of UNAMIR does not allow you to extend protection to the informant, his identity and your contacts with him will not be repeated not be revealed.
8. If you have major problems with the guidance provided above, you may consult us further. We wish to stress, however, that the overriding consideration is the need to avoid entering into a course of action that might lead to the use of force and unanticipated repercussions. Regards.

RWANDA: A HISTORICAL NOTE

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

Rwanda, the “land of one thousand hills,” located in the middle of the continent, is one of Africa’s most densely populated countries with 819 persons per square mile. Tensions between the two major ethnic groups, the Hutus and Tutsis, go back for centuries. The Hutu agriculturalists were first to arrive around 1000 BCE. Around 1400 another ethnic group, the pastoralist Tutsi, moved into the same region. Eventually the two groups came to share the same language, customs and even intermarried. Today the population is 90% Hutu and 10% Tutsi.

Over the centuries a system of clientage emerged with Hutus and poor Tutsis receiving land, cattle and protection in return for services and a share of the crops from Tutsi overlords. In rare cases a Hutu could acquire enough wealth and prestige to become considered a Tutsi so the system had some fluidity. During the early 19th century, a Tutsi monarchy was established covering most of Rwanda. At the Berlin conference of 1884, where the European powers divided Africa between themselves, Rwanda was assigned to the Germans. They governed indirectly through the existing Tutsi hierarchy and regarded the Tutsi as racially superior because of their tall, thin stature according to the spurious racial theories of the time. The Tutsis called on German troops to repress Hutu uprisings.

After Germany’s loss in World War I, Rwanda was given to Belgium which again ruled through the Tutsi ruling class who collected taxes and recruited labor for them, greatly increasing the burden on the Hutu peasantry and leaving them dangerously vulnerable to famine. The Belgian administration further institutionalized the difference between Hutus and Tutsis by stamping identity cards with one ethnicity or the other. They also favored the Tutsi’s in the colonial administration, in education advancement and in the administrative service.

During the 1950s as independence approached Tutsi fears grew as the implications of potential ethnic voting blocs became clear. Furthermore Belgian favoritism looking to post-independence relations shifted to the Hutus. In 1961 in U.N. supervised elections, Rwanda voted to eliminate the Tutsi monarchy and replace it with a democratic system inevitably dominated by Hutus. In 1963 an attack by Tutsi rebels came within 5 miles of Kigali before it was repulsed; in revenge the president ordered the massacre of 10,000 Tutsi. In 1973 another revolution established Hutu Gen. Juvénal Habyarimana as President of a one-party state and established a regime not so much based on Tutsis vs. Hutus as on nepotism.

SHAKE HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

In 1990, the Rwandan Patriotic Front (RPF), composed largely of Tutsi refugees in Uganda, invaded Rwanda. A ceasefire was reached and plans for a transitional government reached in August, 1993. In November the U.N. dispatched a 2500 person peace keeping mission to Rwanda headed by Canadian Lt. General Roméo Dallaire; this is when Shake Hands with the Devil begins. Hard line Hutu groups adamantly opposed the ceasefire. Meanwhile an increasingly inflammatory media began to play a key role in shaping Rwandan popular opinion. The radio station Mille Collines urged listeners to regard as a traitor every Hutu who did not support the anti-Tutsi movement and to “kill the inyenzi or cockroaches,” as Uganda-born Tutsi were called. The Tutsi, especially refugees, were presented as potential land-grabbers in chronically over-populated Rwanda.

After a plane carrying the presidents of Burundi and Rwanda was shot out of the sky on April 6, 1994 the interahamwe (“those who stand together”) Hutu militias began killing both Tutsi and Hutu moderates on lists drawn up before the plane’s downing. The radio stations gave them until May 5th to “cleanse the country of all Tutsi.” The U.N. reduced its force to 250 as soon as the genocide started. The U.S., chief among other Western powers, tied the U.N.’s hands fearing another peace keeping mission like Somalia, in which U.S. soldiers were killed. France, however, secured the southwest part of the country allowing an escape route for many Hutu militiamen. The RPF took control of the capital on July 4, 1994 and proclaimed a new government headed by two Hutu moderates but real power, most agreed, was held by RPF leader Paul Kagame. In November 1997 trials began under the U.N. established International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in Arusha, Tanzania charged with “prosecuting persons responsible for genocide and other serious violations of international humanitarian law.” The large number of Tutsi and Hutu refugees in the Great Lakes region of Africa, especially in the eastern Congo contributed to an on-going guerilla warfare, famine and disease responsible for the death of up to 3,000,000 people.

The facts for this brief overview come from Kate Tuttle and Roger Fry’s entry in The Encyclopedia Africana.
